This place is difficult to find. It's small and slightly drabby. In other words—it's the perfect DC hangout for us regular folks. And once you walk in, you'll find a cool atmosphere, great entertainment, a good selection of beers, and usually some homemade rice and beans. HR-57 was named after the House Resolution preserving jazz as a unique form of American music. The line-up includes music legends, open mics, comedy acts, and storytelling nights. A bargain cover charge ranging from $3-5 gets you in the door, and it's one of the few places in DC that allows carry-in alcohol with a $3 corkage fee. Good music and BYOB? Perfect. And although this place gets packed, and the sound system can leave something to be desired, it's a DC institution worthy of your support.
